

In the Abstract:

A device for transdermal administration of active substances, comprising a backing layer and an active substance-containing reservoir connected to the backing layer. ~~therewith, is characterised in that the~~ The skin-facing contact surface of ~~[[said]]~~ the device has a plurality of microprotrusions which are suitable for penetrating the skin and which are equipped with structures that make extracting the protrusions from the skin more difficult.